<sup>4</sup> The Aorist of κατέβαινε, "to sit," in Heb 1:3; 8:1; 10:12 seems to stress the installation and session of Christ; the Present in 1:12 marks the continuation of the session; and the Perfect in 12:2 (Blass-Debr. #101) expresses the idea of a finished act of session the finished results of which are still existing. The Pentecostal outpouring was heaven's confirmation that the Redeemer's inauguration was accomplished. . . . <sup>12</sup> This interpretation is typical among dispensationalists. For example W. Kelley, An Exposition of the Acts of the Apostles (3d ed.; London, 1952), pp. 102f. argues: "It was as yet a transitional time and Jesus he saw 'standing there: He had not taken definitely His seat, but was still giving the Jews a final opportunity." F. F. Bruce, The Book of Acts (London, 1968), p. 168, counters this interpretation by emphasizing that "throughout Acts we see them [Jews] receiving further opportunity after opportunity up to the closing verses of Ch. 28." "But the whole assumption, that the gospel has at any time ceased to be offered to Jews as freely as to the Gentiles, is completely devoid of substance."

<sup>14</sup> So Töd, p. 303; A. J. B. Higgins, Jesus and the Son of Man (London, 1964), p. 143, rejects this view as "sheer supposition."

<sup>15</sup> So P. O. Dewe, "Stephen's Vision in Acts 7:51-56," New Testament Studies 1 (1951), 224-226. For arguments on the basis of which this view seems unacceptable, see Töd, p. 304; Higgins, p. 143.

In Ex 25:40, in which the OT sanctuary is constructed after heavenly patterns, serves as a kind of hermeneutical principle."

<sup>42</sup> O. Michel, Der Brief an die Hebräer (6th ed.; Göttingen, 1966), pp. 290f., explains: "The two terms tupodaisma [copy] and skia [shadow] serve the thought pattern of original-copy [in Heb 8:5]. The opposite of original-copy corresponds to the opposites heavenly-earthly." Nasofo, Neues Testamentum 10 (1968), 17: "One should note that the vertical correspondence of heavenly and earthly in Hebrews is restricted to the heavenly sanctuary (and the heavenly Jerusalem, Heb 12:22), and the author does not introduce it as self-evident, but supports it expressly by citing Ex 25:40. <sup>50</sup> The standard Hebrew dictionaries give a variety of meanings for tabern, depending on the contexts in which this term is employed. See L. Kohler and W. Baumgartner, Lexicon in Veteri Testamento (Leiden, 1953), p. 1018; F. Brown, S. R. Driver, and C. A. Briggs, Hebrew and English Lexicon of the OT (2d ed.; Oxford, 1953), p. 125; W. L. These dictionaries are hereafter cited with KBL, BDB, CHAL, and HAD respectively.

<sup>51</sup> So quite correctly the most recent study of this term by S. Wagner, "ιεράρχης," Theologisches Wörterbuch zum AT, eds. H. Ringgren and G. H.

Böttner (Stuttgart, 1974), Vol. I, p. 703, who speaks of tabernaculum in Ex 25:9, 40 in terms of a "Vorabild" (copy), "Urbild" (pattern), "Modell" (model), and "Entwurf" (miniature) presentation).

32 This is held among others by S. R. Driver, The Book of Exodus (Cambridge, 1911), p. 267; A. H. McNeile, The Book of Exodus (London, 1917), p. 195; G. von Rad, Die Priesterseiten im Hexateuch (Stuttgart, 1934), p. 213; K. Galli, Exodus (Göttingen, 1939), p. 130; M. 33 Among several E. G. White statements (PP, 343, 357; SR, 377; GC, 414) on what Moses was shown is the following: "God himself devised the plan [of the sanctuary and its furnishings], and gave it to Moses . . . He presented before Moses a miniature model of the heavenly sanctuary, and commanded him to make all things according to the pattern showed him in the Mount" ("Spiritual Gifts," Vol. 4, p. 3).

34 Some of the older commentators (Faber Stapulensis, Storr, von Gerlach, Ebrard, etc.) had held this interpretation.

36 The terms skia and hypodeigma are used respectively.

37 Michel, Hebräer, p. 288.

38 This is one of the terms that has prompted many scholars to interpret Hebrews in terms of Platonic philosophy. Recent research indicates that the ideas in Hebrews do not reflect Platonism with its ideal world and heavenly archetypes that could be reached only by the intellect. See R. Williamson, "Platonism and Hebrews," Scottish Journal of Theology 16 (1963), 418; idem, Philo and the Epistle to the Hebrews (Leiden, 1970), pp. 557-573; G. W. 41 M. Dahood, Psalms II (Garden City, 1968), pp. 79, 96, 152, points to Pss 20:3; 61:8[6]; 58:36; 62:2[3]; 68:35[36]; 73:17; 96:6; and in Psalms III (Garden City, 1970), p. 359, to Ps 130:1. H. Koester, Theological Dictionary of the NT, Vol. VIII, p. 199 n. 85, states that Ps 96:6 refers to the heavenly sanctuary. M. Metzger, "Himmliche undirdische Wohnstatt Jahwes," Ugarit-Forschungen Bd. 2 (Kevelaer, 1970), pp. 139-158, believes that Ps 11:4; 102:20; and 130:1 refer to the heavenly sanctuary.

42 The Hebrew term bēkāl means normally "palace, temple" but with reference to God it can refer to the pre-Solomonic sanctuary of God (1 Sam 1:9; 3:3; cf. Jdg 8:31; 1 Sam 1:7).

43 This is the consensus of commentators. See also E. Jenni, "bējît Haus," Theologisches Wörterbuch zum AT, eds. E. Jenni and C. Westermann (München, 1971), Vol. I, col. 313; BDB, p. 228; Metzger, Ugarit-Forschungen Bd. 2, p. 140.

44 In the Hebrew Bible and many modern versions, it is vs. 7. This verse has a parallel in 2 Sam 22:7.

45 A. Weiser, The Psalms (Philadelphia, 1962), p. 189. M. Dahood, Psalms I (Garden City, 1965), p. 106: "bēkāl refers to God's palace in heaven as in Pss xi, 4, xiii 9." Cf. BDB, p. 228.

46 Weiser, p. 264; Dahood, Psalms I, pp. 106, 179; R. E. Murphy, "Psalms," The Jerome Biblical Commentary (Englewood Cliffs, 1968), p. 581.

47 So in Pss 60:6 (Hebrew vs. 8); 63:2 (Hebrew vs. 2); 102:19 (Hebrew vs. 20); 130:1.

48 So in Pss 68:35; 96:6.

49 With RSV, NAB, NEB, instead of "by his holiness" (RSVmg, NEBmg). See BDB, p. 871; Dahood, Psalms II, p. 79. The words "in his sanctuary" suggest to some modern interpreters the scene of a festival such as that mentioned in Dt. 31:10ff.

50 There are commentators that suggest that the "sanctuary" is that in Jerusalem (for example, H. Ringgren, Psalmen [Stuttgart, 1971], p. 22) but other commentators seem to suggest correctly that here the celestial abode of God is in the mind of the Psalmist. So Dahood, Psalms II, p. 96. If the superscription has any historical significance, then the "sanctuary" seems to have to refer to the heavenly dwelling place of God.

51 See among others Metzger, Ugarit-Forschungen, Bd. 2, p. 140; Dahood, Psalms II, p. 192; Weiser, Psalms, p. 490.

52 Koester, Theological Dictionary to the NT, vol. VIII, p. 199n. 85; H. Zorell, Lexicon Hebraicum (Rome, 1968), p. 334; F. Delitzsch, Psalms. Commentary on the OT (Grand Rapids, Mich., 1959), Vol. III, pp. 91f.

53 Many modern English versions render the Hebrew phrase mērôm qodəl with "holy height" (RSV, NASB, NAB). The rendering "sanctuary on high" may be preferred on contextual and syntactical grounds. See Metzger, Ugarit-Forschungen, Bd. 2, 140.

54 Dahood, Psalms III, p. 359; Murphy, "Psalms," Jeremie Bibel Kommentar, p. 602. "The heavenly 'sanctuary' is meant, as the parallelism suggests."

55 In Hebrew vs. 9.

61 In Hebrew vs. 8.

62 Among others also Dahood, Psalms I, p. 179. For W. Rudolph, Joel-Amos-Obadja Jona (Gütersloh, 1971), p. 354, it may refer either to the heavenly temple or the earthly one.

63 So definitely King (see note 79) and J. L. McKenzie, Second Isaiah (Garden City, 1968), p. 191, who even translates the Hebrew temple zebul, "exalted dwelling" (CHAL, p. 86), with "holy temple" (p. 189).

64 Delitzsch, Psalms, p. 189.

65 Among special studies treating the question of the heavenly sanctuary in Rev are H. Bietenhard, Die himmlische Welt im Urchristentum sind Spätjudentum (Tübingen, 1951), pp. 130-132; Y. M. J. Congar, La mystère du Temple (Paris, 1958), pp. 249f.; A. Cody, The Heavenly Sanctuary and Liturgy in the Epistle to the Hebrews (St. Meinard, 1962), pp. 30ff.; O Michel, "zebul," Theologisches Wörterbuch zum NT, Vol. IV, 892-895.

66 The Greek term employed for the heavenly temple-sanctuary is always naos (ναός) in Rev 4:1-2; 7:15; 8:3; 11:19; 14:15; 17; 15:5-6; 8; 16:1; 17, but is rendered in modern translations either with "temple" or "sanctuary."

67 This text shows that the Revelator does not seek to distinguish between a "tent sanctuary" and a "house sanctuary," viz. temple of palace, because the prefix "the temple of the tent of witness" associates the terms naos (ναός), "temple," and shēmē (σημεῖον) in such a way as to leave no doubt about the identity of both. It should be noted that the LXX has also rendered the Hebrew term bēkāl, "temple," where applied to the "tent sanctuary" with naos in 1 Sam 1:9; 3:3.

68 The "throne" appears 39 times in Rev and seems to have a major place in its visions.

69 This does in no way indicate Rev has adopted the crude realism of Rabbinic speculations about the heavenly sanctuary in which Michael is said to sacrifice daily upon the altar. See Bietenhard, pp. 15ff.; H. L. Strack — P. Billerbeck, Kommentar zum Neuen Testamente aus Talmud und Midrasch (Leipzig, 1923-1961), Vol. III, pp. 700ff.

70 E. G. White, Patriarchs and Prophets, p. 357, has stated that "no earthly structure could represent its vastness and its glory."

71 Michel, Theologisches Wörterbuch zum NT, Vol. IV, p. 893, summarizes: "The heavenly temple is therefore for the Revelator the dwelling-place of the majesty of God, priestly sanctuary for the ministry of angels and translated ones and mysterious origin of divine orders."

72 Schneider, p. 70; idem, Der Hebräerbrief (Berlin, 1953), p. 72.

73 Theissen, p. 105.

74 That "sanctuary" (hagia) and "tabernacle (or tent)" (shēmē) are identical is argued among others by B. Weiss, Der Brief an die Hebräer (Göttingen, 1888), pp. 197f.; C. Spicq, L'Epître Aux Hebreus (Paris, 1953), II, 234; Rüggenbach, p. 218; O. Kuss, Der Brief an die Hebräer (2d ed., Regensburg, 1966), p. 107; J. Hering, The Epistle to the Hebrews (London, 1970), p. 66; Buchanan, p. 133. A different interpretation is proposed by H. Koester, "Outside the Camp," Heb 13:9-14, "Harvard Theological Review" 55 (1962), 299-315, and T. Hewitt, The Epistle to the Hebrews (Grand Rapids, Mich., 1960), p. 135.

75 The NEB translates quite correctly in Heb 8:2 "real sanctuary" instead of the traditional "true tabernacle."

99 Williamson, pp. 557-570, demonstrates that there is no Platonism or Philonism in Heb 8:3.

100 O. Hofius, "Das 'erste' und das 'zweite' Zelt. Ein Beitrag zur Auslegung von Hbr 9, 1-10," ZNW 61 (1970), 271-277, has shown philologically that this is sound.

101 F. Josephus, De Bello Iudeico, V, 184, 186 (V.V.1), 193, 194 (V.V.2), 195 (V.V.2).

102 There is now solid philological support for the spatial emphasis of two compartments. The lack of this had led some expositors to interpret 9:25 cosmologically, i.e. the "first tent" is earth and the "second tent" is heaven.

103 Hofius, ZNW 61 (1970), 275, emphasizes as Rigenbach (p. 238) did before him that in Heb 9:2 the author of Heb "describes the structure of the tent sanctuary and in so doing has emphatically emphasized its separation in two distinct compartments."

104 A. P. Salom, "TA HAGIA in the Epistle to the Hebrews," Andrews University Seminary Studies 5 (1967), 59-70; Cody, p. 147f.; Buchanan, p. 144.

105 This is supported by Michel, Hebräer, pp. 199f.; and H. Windisch, Der Hebräerbrieft, (2d ed., Tübingen, 1931), p. 77, both of whom argue that heisst in vs. 9 refers to the total prior sanctuary idea.

106 Cody, pp. 147f. This view is identical to that of M. L. Andreasen, The Book of Hebrews (Washington, D.C., 1948), pp. 327f., and the commentary on "Hebrews," SDA Bible Commentary (Washington, D.C., 1957), Vol. VII, p. 450: "The context makes clear that ta hagia here refers to that 'greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands' (ch. 9:11), that is, the heavenly sanctuary (cf. vs. 24, 25)."

125 So J. Suelnam, S.J., "The Greater and More Perfect Tent." A Contribution to the Discussion of Hebrews 9, 11," Biblica 47 (1966), 92, although he believes that the spirit of Hebrews is metaphorical. A. Vanhoye, S.J., "Par la tente plus grande et plus parfaite . . ." (He 9, 11), Biblica 46 (1965), 5, writes unhesitatingly, "This interpretation evidently is in agreement, in 9:11, with the letter of the text."
